

McAdoo Looms as Winner In Spite of Withdrawal

David Lawrence Sees in the Son-in-Law of the President the Next Candidate—Belief He Will be Named is Growing but Conjecture Still as to Why He Pulled Out.

San Francisco, June 25.—The veil of doubt concerning the McAdoo candidacy is lifting. The former secretary of the treasury has been named as the next candidate for the presidency. The announcement was made by David Lawrence, a prominent writer and editor, who has been a close friend of Mr. McAdoo since the latter's withdrawal from the race.

Indeed, the latter is a highly respected figure in New York last week that if his name were presented for nomination, the "Virginia" would be authorized to say it was being done without his consent or sanction.

Glass Is for McAdoo
Nevertheless, Mr. McAdoo's nomination and will make a fight for it. The story told by men in the confidence of Mr. McAdoo is that the reasons for his withdrawal from the race are of a personal nature, and that he has considered the question from the angle of a family man, and that he has decided to withdraw from the race.

Every friend of McAdoo here says he is thoroughly sincere in his inclination to run for office. Why nominate him, then?
To that question comes the uniform answer from these same McAdoo men, that in "times like these" the duty that a man may owe to his party and his country, they are absolutely of the hour and must make the run, and with that idea in mind they are planning to draft him for the White House.

So far as President Wilson is concerned, nobody here has had a word from him on candidates and Senator Glass, who is in close touch with Mr. Wilson, has not yet received any word from the president. The same hesitancy is shown by the other candidates, and it is said by those who have been close to the president's phone that the administration is not yet ready to make a decision on the matter.

When Mr. McAdoo asked therefore, "What more can I do?" he was told that he should not ask for anything more, but that he should wait and see what the future holds for him.

BRYAN AND "SILVER THREADS" IN RACE FOR POPULARITY

Says Abe Martin

San Francisco, June 25.—Those who have been reading and political editorials will find that the difference between the crowds that attended the late Chicago convention and the things that were heard there is the difference between the "Silver Threads" and the "Gold" of Bryan.

COUNCIL MAY ACT ON RAISE REQUEST

Police and Firemen To Know Fate Monday When Council Meets.

Action on the fire and police commission's recommendation of a $10 monthly raise for firemen and police is expected to be taken by the city council at its regular meeting at the city hall at 8 o'clock Monday evening. Whether or not favorable action will be taken is a conjecture which it is considered that from figures gathered by the city clerk it was found that the city's annual payroll for the year 1919 was $1,100,000.

Some Noted Battles In Democratic Conventions

BY STEPHEN HOLLES

It looks as though the democratic convention at San Francisco, which is to have its opening on Monday, would be another one of those fights which have been the usual thing at these gatherings of democratic leaders. Fighting is the first and most usual condition of the democratic convention. The "frisco" is its first name. It is fought when Stephen A. Douglas was nominated in 1860 and the party split in twain over slavery and the future of the territories. It went into battle when Tilden was named in 1876 and again fought with Tammany in 1884 and 1888. It was the last, however, when General Bryan of Omaha was elected.

Indeed, the latter is a highly respected figure in New York last week that if his name were presented for nomination, the "Virginia" would be authorized to say it was being done without his consent or sanction.

FULL CAVALRY UNIT OF 50 MEN ASSURED, CAPTAIN DECLARES

Confidence that Janesville's new cavalry unit will go over the top in securing recruits before inspection at the camp, Tuesday night, was expressed today by Capt. H. Chubb.

Under a recent ruling of the war department only 50 men are needed for federal recognition of a national guard company.

"We have more than 30 signed up now," said Captain Chubb. "About 15 of us were planning to sign last night. We expect to get from 15 to 20 in addition to these. After formal inspection and muster we should have little trouble."

CHARLES PROTEST CITY PAVING TAX

Another Appeal Filed in Circuit Court—Assessment Is $1,038.

Added trouble to the already ailing city council and board of public works was sent today with the appeal from paving assessments by N. L. Carle and Joseph H. Carle, legal notice was served on City Clerk E. J. Sartell that an appeal is being made to circuit court on assessments aggregating $1,038.34.

Two Other Appeals.

E. C. Darpe has already instituted a case against the board of public works for alleged failure to give notice of paving in front of his Pleasant street property. W. T. Hill, alderman from the Fourth, seeks to be relieved from paying for paving between street-car tracks on South Jackson and South Franklin streets. These two appeals are also in circuit court.

In the Carle's appeal, after mentioning assessments and description of their property on West Milwaukee street, it goes on to say:

"Wherefore, the owners of said parcels of land feel themselves aggrieved by reason of the determination made by the council and do hereby appeal from the paving and determination of the council to circuit court."

The Carle property is on the north side of West Milwaukee street near the Five Points. It is described as the east 132 feet of lot 5 of Mitchell's addition, except railway right-of-way and the west one-sixth of lot 4, same addition.

HEALTH OFFICER WARNS OF NEED OF REPORTING CASES

"There is too much laxity in Janesville in reporting cases of contagious and communicable diseases to the proper authorities," declared Dr. Fred B. Welch, city health officer today. "The state law provides a penalty for a person who knowingly fails to report such a case to the board of health or health officer."

He spoke of the spread of a disease blaming failure to report the first case as the cause of the health officer's isolation, that is, quarantine, is the only method that can be used to avoid epidemics, he declared.

Members of the board of health and myself want the cooperation of every citizen, especially along this line," he continued.

Found delinquent school children to be the best at adding us. They tell us of many cases which otherwise might not be reported.

Every citizen should do this.

"The safest and best way to do when you contract an illness is to call in a physician who has to diagnose the case. The state law requires this. If a person is unable to pay for this he must notify the health officer."

He explained that the city's health is normal at the present time, only a few cases being up for chicken pox, small pox, diphtheria and measles. There are no cases of diphtheria. He seeks to avoid any of these diseases becoming general.

TURKISH HAREM IS PASSE, WOMEN SHOW FACES ON STREET

Constantinople.—Turkish women are no longer the shy veiled creatures who passed their time in the seclusion of the harem and were never seen by foreign men. They still cling to the veil. But the streets of Constantinople and other larger Turkish cities are filled with women who have their veils thrown back from their faces. They are highly unbecomingly and becoming. Most Turkish women don't want to abandon them in favor of hats. But there are many sorts of veils and the small black veils which some of the women wear are fetching when draped artistically over their hair.

Curtains Drawn Back

In the railway and street cars there are special seats for women, but the flimsy curtains which are supposed to screen them from the gaze of men are usually drawn back and it is not uncommon to see men standing in the compartments for women. Only old men are rash enough to sit down by the same woman with a Turkish woman. Turkish women seldom go to a theater where there are men. Special matinees and evening performances are arranged for women only.

War Breaks Barrier

The war has one much to break down the barrier between Turkish men and women. The women were needed so badly for war work and for the government had to avail itself of their services. And now it is regarded as quite proper for men and women to be associated in all sorts of charitable and educational works. Consequently many women who were formerly forced to content themselves with seclusion in the home where fancy work and French novels were the only diversions are devoting their time to hospitals, orphanages and other philanthropic institutions.

Educated Are Leaders

Women who have been educated abroad or in the foreign schools of Turkey are the leaders in this movement. They are the republicans and their sex. Their broad experience in war work has interested many women in politics and they have openly played a great part in the nationalist movement. In the Constantinople American Women's college the Turkish girls take great interest in basketball and other athletic games, and the effect of foreign influence is making the old life of seclusion and inactivity unattractive to younger Turkish women.

HOMES TO BE BUILT UNDER DAKOTA LAWS

Fargo, N. D.—The Home Builders association, a part of the Nonpartisan industrial program put into effect by enactment of the January legislature, expects to begin erecting houses this summer.

The home builders' law permits the purchase of a home for any man upon payment of 25 per cent of the cost, the balance to be paid in monthly installments, fixed to suit the purchaser.

P. R. Pollard, special representative of the state industrial commission, says that 52 dwellings will be built and ready for occupancy later than the first of next September. Building materials, he says, are now intransigent.

Twenty of the houses to be erected by the state will be put up in Fargo and eight each in Grand Forks, Mandan, New Rockford, and Bismarck.

The houses are to be five to eight rooms each and to cost from $4,000 to $7,000.

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By RANDALL FARRISH
Author of "The Devil's Own,"
"My Lady of the North," Etc.

(Copyright, by Randall Farrish.)

CHAPTER XV.

Miss Donovan decided. Two men came in through the door together, each with a small grip in his hand. Timmons took from them and deposited beside the stove. The larger wrote both names in the register, and then scrutinized up, and surveyed the landlord.

"Any chance to eat?" he asked. "We're both of us about starved."

"Timmons there's plenty of cold provender out there," he said doubtfully. "An' maybe I could hustle you up some hot coffee, but we don't dim do no teedin' at this time o' night. What's the matter with the diner?"

"Hot box, and had to cut her off; be a good fellow, and hustle us up something."

"I'll see what there is," and Timmons started for the kitchen. "But I wouldn't wake Mr. Timmons up for a thousand dollars. She'd never get over it."

The large man, a rather heavy-footed fellow with scraggly gray moustache, turned to his companion. "Better luck than I expected to that Colgate."

His eyes caught sight of Cavendish, and he spoke without moving his lips.

"Our bird; stand ready."

The three were talking earnestly, and he was standing before them before any of the group marked his approach. His eyes were on Cavendish, who instantly arose to his feet, startled by the man's sudden appearance.

"There is no use making a scene, Burke," the big man said sternly. "For my partner there has you covered."

"My name is not Burke; it is Cavendish."

"So I heard in Denver," dryly. "We hardly expect to find you here, for we were down on another matter. So you are not Gentleman Tom Burke?"

"No."

"I know he is not," interposed Westcott. "I have been acquainted with this man for nearly two years. He is a New York capitalist."

"And who the hell are you—a pair?" the fellow sneered. "Now, see here, both of you, I am not a capitalist. My business is to forget a face. This man is under arrest, and he laid a hand heavily on Cavendish's shoulder."

"Under the name of Burke? On what charge?"

"Robbery, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. wanted also for burglary and assault in Denver. My name is Roberts," he added stiffly, "assistant superintendent of the Pinkerton agency; the man with me is an operative from the New York office."

Cavendish glanced past Roberts toward Colgate, who stood with one hand thrust in his side pocket.

"You know this man Burke?" he asked.

"I saw him once; that's why I was put on the case. You certainly gave me some hot chase, Tom."

"Some chase? What do you mean?"

"Well, I've been on your trail ever since that Poughkeepsie job—let's see, that was two months ago, and I jumped first to New York city, and then to the Pennsylvania depot, to which I showed your picture, and he slipped that you'd been a late train west. After that I trailed you through Chicago, down into Mexico, and back as far as Denver. He signed the same name."

"Of course, it's my own. You say you had a picture of me?"

"A police picture; here it is if you want to look at it—taken in Joliet. Westcott grasped the sketch and spread it out on the table. Cavendish's face clearly enough, even to the closely trimmed beard and the peculiar twinkle in the eyes, and was printed on a brief description, and was also fitted Cavendish almost exactly."

"Well," said Roberts, none too pleasantly, "what have you to say now?"

"Only this," and the miner squared his shoulders, looking the light in the eyes. "This man is not Tom Burke, but I can tell you where Tom Burke is."

"Yes, you can!"

"Yes, I can. I can not only tell you, but I can prove it," he went on earnestly. "This description," says Burke had a small, clipped nose, of one ear, and that he had a gold-crowned tooth in front, rather prominent. This man's ears are unmarked, and his teeth are of the ordinary kind."

The two detectives exchanged glances and Roberts grinned sarcastically.

"You'll have to do better than that," he said gruffly.

"All right, there are any mention in that description of a peculiar and vivid scar on the chest of this man Burke? It would be spoken about, if he had any, wouldn't it?"

"Sure, they never overlook them things."

"Good; unbutton the front of your shirt, Fred."

The two stared at the scar thus revealed, still incredulous, yet unable to refute the evidence of its existence. Roberts touched it with his fingers to better assure himself of its reality.

"Darn it all," he confessed. "This beats me!"

"It does," coincided Westcott. "This whole affair has been of that kind. Now I'll tell you where Tom Burke is—buried in the Cavendish family lot in Brooklyn."

He turned to Colgate, who stood with mouth half open.

"You're from New York; ever hear of the Cavendish murder?"

"Only saw a paragraph in the Chicago papers. It wasn't my case, and the only thing that interested me was that the name happened to be the same as assumed by the man I was following."

"Because this gentleman here is Frederick Cavendish, who was reported as killed—struck down in his apartments on the night of April 16. Instead he took the midnight flyer west and you followed him. The dead man was Tom Burke; wait a minute and I'll tell you the story—all I know of it at least."

He told it rapidly, yet omitting no detail of any interest. The two detectives, already half convinced of their mistake, listened fascinated to the strange narrative. It was a tale of crime, peculiarly attractive to their minds; they could picture each scene in all its colors of reality. As the speaker, Roberts drew in his breath sharply.

"But, who slugged Burke?" he asked. "The fellow went in there after sunset; but who got him?"

"That is one question I can't answer," replied Westcott gravely, "and neither can Fred. It doesn't seem to accord with the rest of our theories. Enright told Lacy he didn't know who the dead man was, or who killed him."

Miss Donovan pushed her way in front of Cavendish, and faced the others, her cheeks flushed with excitement, a paper clasped in one hand.

"Perhaps I can help you clear that up," she said clearly. "This is the letter found under Miss La Rue's bed. I've read part of it. It was written by Jack Cavendish just as he was taking a boat for South America. It is not a confession, she explained, her eyes searching their faces. "Just a frightened boy's letter. I wouldn't understand it all if I didn't know so much about the case. What it seems to make clear is this: 'The La Rue girl and Patrick Enright schemed to get possession of the Cavendish property through her marriage to John. This part of the program worked out fairly well, but John could not get hold of enough money to satisfy them."

"The gushing lady who met the ship," the pie in Hoboken, and you to do something for the boys didn't know that. She saw him come down the gangplank, and near the Red Cross cases stand she cornered him. 'Oh, what have you come out of it all as you went in? Tell me what great lesson you learned—what wonderful truth must have impressed itself upon your mind.'"

"Yes," answered the soldier obediently. "I found out that lemons ain't no good for seasickness."

"The Ironie Sector."

"Said the humorous man in a tram-car: 'Has anyone here dropped a roll of notes with a rubber elastic around them?'"

"Yes, I have," cried half a dozen at once.

"Well," said the funny man, calmly, "I've just picked up the elastic."

"Marry that young snip? Certainly not! He is only after your money, and he is, in my opinion, a fool."

"You are unjust, father. Harold would never marry me if I had not a penny."

"Huh! Then he is even a greater fool than I thought him to be!"

If they got loose on deck and any one had left a nice apple in his steamer bag, of course they ate it up. Who could blame them? A up, red apple tastes like two red apples when found at sea, but if there were no red apples to eat, they would chew the leaves out of the books and magazines left lying around.

At another time they came up 13—and a steward, in a narrow passageway, who was carrying a large tray of soup on his head. There not being room to pass, and Night being in a hurry, he set his head plumb in the middle of the steward's back and began pushing him along.

JUDA

[By Gazette Correspondent.]

Juda, June 26.—Mrs. Mary Pen-gra, wife of W. S. Pengra, died at her home here Brodhead June 15. Mrs. Ellen Preston, the daughter of Nathaniel and Charlotte Cook Preston, was born Nov. 2, 1853, on a farm near this place. In early childhood she was bereft by death of a father's care and protection. Sept. 3, 1874, she was married to Winfield S. Pengra, and for more than 40 years they had lived together. Their early life was spent on the farm, and it was there that five children were born to them—Charlotte, Mabel, Preston, Della, and Marshall. In 1892 the family moved to Madison to give the children the benefits of a further education. After they had completed their various courses, they moved to Brodhead, in 1905.

Mrs. Pengra always took an active part in all temperance, educational, charitable, and social betterment work, having served for three terms as member of the school board, and for several years as president of the Woman's Study club.

About six months ago her health began to fail, but she came unexpectedly. She is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. Mabel Foster, Racine; Mrs. Della Briggs, Lubbock, Tex.; and Marshall E. Pengra, Independence, Ore. Two children, Charlotte C. Pengra, and Preston, preceded their mother in death. One brother, Arthur T. Preston, Brodhead, and one half brother, Will Preston, Labannon, Ore., and nine grandchildren, complete the family circle.

The funeral was held at the home Thursday afternoon, at which Rev. A. N. Brown spoke words of comfort, and Frank Ten Eyck sang her favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation." The interment was in Mt. Vernon cemetery, Juda.

Many Brodhead folks who visited the Juda cemetery last week exclaimed over the beauty of the grounds and their location.

Golden Grenzow and Charles and Wenzel Martin hurt and family are visiting at T. J. Blackford's, Janesville. Grace came down with the measles while there.

Bloomer.—A new car belonging to Richard Boehm of this city was stolen by auto thieves. Chief of Police E. J. Blensang, Jefferson, found a car abandoned, but in good condition just containing the name of the owner was under the seat. The chief finding this information, Boehm who went to Jefferson and drove the machine back.

Barron.—Barron has been the scene of many burglaries lately. The Dorman's store plate glass window was broken and a quantity of clothing was stolen. The Halman Brothers' feed mill was entered and the cash drawer emptied. An attempt was also made to enter L. M. Giddings' Jewelry store.

Peerless Radiators for Fords

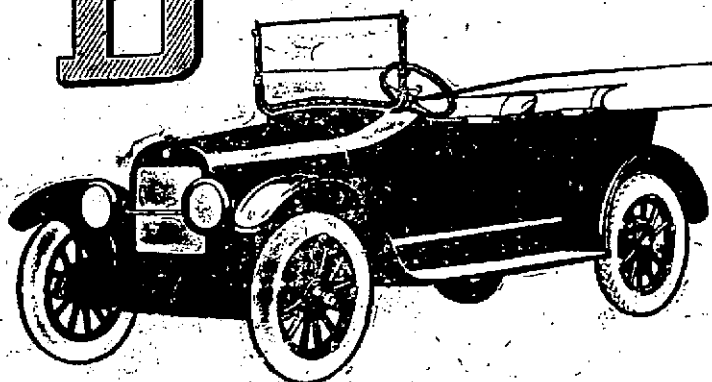

Peerless radiators keep your Ford cool in summer. They have 5,600 square inches of cooling surface compared with 1,211 in the tubular type. The Peerless also has 174 inches of water in the channels while the other has but 44.6 inches, ¼ the capacity. The flat films of water in the Peerless core are only 1-16 inch thick. The smooth tubes of the other style carry a 3-16 inch solid stream, which falls straight through, a large portion of the stream not coming into direct contact with the tube, so the heat is carried back to the engine.

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

Price is not the most important consideration in the selection of an automobile.

Value is!

The price of the Dort is not high, but it is sufficient to include important features that cheaper cars do not have.

At the same time it is much lower in price than other cars which possess those features.

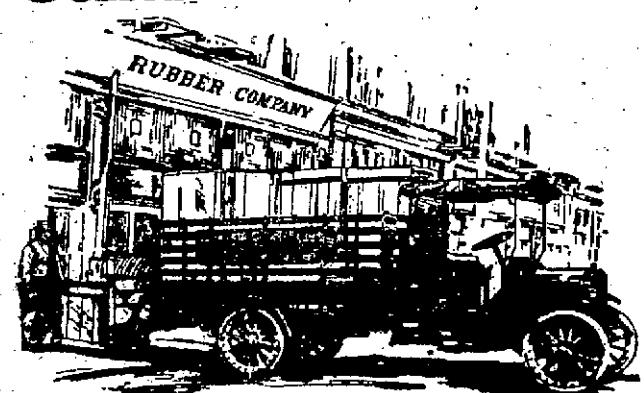

It will, therefore, satisfy the purchaser who has paid more for a car in the past—while to him who has paid less it will prove an unexpected revelation.

It is a trim, well finished automobile, of correct proportions, with riding and driving qualities quite distinctive among cars of its class.

A 27-inch smooth troweled cement walk table extends around entire house, with magnesite stucco from water table to belt course, and shingles on side gables and dormer. The feature of this semi-bungalow is the large living room across the entire front, brick fireplace, bookcase arch leading to dining room, which is provided with a very artistic buffet and china closet. The second floor rooms have full height ceilings, still maintaining the low bungalow effect, making a very desirable interior and exterior appearance.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A PORCH, new doors and windows, a better roof, shutters—and the old home is almost new again. If you think it can't be done, then call and see our plans.

A glazed door providing a daylight vestibule replaces the old front stoop. Wings at the sides made possible both a living porch and a sleeping porch. A broad roof and shutters add a touch of hominess. In this simple way, a home of beauty and usefulness was made out of an old house.

If you are unable to build a new home just now, why not remodel the old house? A little fixing here and there will make it more comfortable and livable. If it is shabby, remodeling will improve its appearance and value.

You will be surprised and pleased when you find how economical it is to remodel an old house. Come in and we'll talk it over together.
